Breeding Values and what the figures mean - according to Signet.

Beef Value

The goal of the Beef Value is to 'improve financial returns by improving carcass weight, fat and conformation in line with current commercial carcass pricing structure'.

E.g. a bull with a Beef Value of +20 B is expected to produce calves with £10 more value in terms of carcass weight, fat and conformation than calves sired by a bull with a Beef Value of 0 B.

Calving Value

The Calving Value is designed to be a terminal sire selection tool. It's objective is to 'improve financial returns, by reducing costs associated with difficult calving's and longer gestation length's.' It is calculated using the EBV's for Calving Ease (direct) and Gestation Length, both of which are highly correlated to Birth weight. The higher the Calving Value the fewer difficulties that should be encountered at calving.

E.g. a bull with a Calving Value of +4 is expected to produce calves that save an average of £2 in calving and gestation length costs compared to calves sired by a bull with a calving value of 0 C.

Maternal Value

The Maternal Value is designed to predict the overall economic value of an animal's genetic ability to produce breeding females. In the female it predicts the overall value of an animal's maternal characteristics. It is calculated using EBV's for Maternal Calving Ease, 200-day milk, Age at first Calving, Longevity and Calving Interval.

E.g. a bull with a Maternal Value of +20 is expected to produce female replacements whose maternal characteristics are worth, on average, £10 more to the herd over their lifetime than females produced by sires with a Maternal Value of 0 V.

Maternal Production Value

The Maternal Production Value is designed to predict the economic value of an animal in terms of its genetic ability to produce quality females for breeding and beef carcass characteristics. It is calculated using the Calving Value, Beef Value, Maintenance Value (when available to the Luing breed) and Maternal Value.

E.g. a bull with a Production Value of +60 P is expected to produce offspring that, on average, are worth an additional an additional £30 to the herd by merit of their maternal and terminal sire attributes than offspring of a bull with a Production Value of 0 P.

Myostatin Testing and Sire Verification

Myostatin.

The bulls forward for sale have all had DNA analysis results reported. Myostatin status has been reported in the footnotes of each bull.

Sire verification.

DNA from the bull for sale has been compared with DNA taken from his sire to ensure that the sire mentioned in the pedigree is correct.
